ALBERT WOHLSTETTER

Information contained in the files of this Bureau concerning one Albert Wohlstetter, which is set forth below, may be identical to the subject of your inquiry.

In connection with a Department of State Visa Application on the part of Heinz Czezowiczka, dated January 23, 1945, Albert Wohlstetter, 200 West 108th Street, New York, New York, and Nathan K. Mendelschn, 200 West 108th Street, New York, New York, appeared as sponsors. Information available to this Bureau discloses one Nathan Mendelsohn, 182 East 92nd Street, Brooklyn, New York, was a registered communist voter in New York City for the year 1937. Heinz Czezowiczka, also known as Harry Lewis Chester, who was born on January 17, 1912, in Vienna, Austria, became a naturalized American citizen on February 20, 1950, in Detroit, Michigan. He was interviewed by Agents of this Bureau on June 24, 1954, and admitted membership and association with the Austrian Communist Youth Organization from approximately 1931 to 1936 or 1937. He admitted disillusionment with communism after the Russian Purge Trials.

On August 13, 1948, a confidential source who has furnished reliable information in the past observed [REDACTED] of Albert Wohlstetter, General Panel Corporation, 1211 West Victory Boulevard, Burbank, California, telephone number CH6-5145 and residence as 1250 East Saltair, West Los Angeles, California, in [REDACTED] of Mr. Salomon Liebermann and wife Jean. Jean Liebermann was born August 12, 1912, in Boston, Massachusetts, and is the former wife of Hermann Haviland Field who was alleged to have been a courier for admitted Soviet espionage agent Dr. Paul Wilhelm Massing in Europe in 1935 and 1936. In 1940 she married Salomon Liebermann, a citizen of Switzerland, and returned to the United States with him in 1945. During the 1950's we conducted an investigation of the Liebermanns based on their alleged membership in the Communist Party (CP) and Salomon Liebermann's activities in the California Labor School and other CP Front Groups. Salomon Liebermann was interviewed on June 15, 1951, and denied ever having been a member of the CP.

Albert Wohlstetter

On December 14, 1949, a confidential source who has furnished reliable information in the past advised he received a circular on the Westland School, 8307 DeLongpre Avenue, Los Angeles, California. The circular described the school as a nonprofit organization which was founded in September, 1949, by a group of parents in Los Angeles. It further described itself as a progressive school for boys and girls between the ages of 4 1/2 and 10. The name Albert Wohlstetter appeared as a member of the Board of Directors. The Advisory Board, Board of Directors and Staff consisted of 29 individuals. The Director and 9 other individuals at that time were reported by sources to have been members of the Communist Party, however, there was no evidence of attempts by the school to introduce communist propaganda or doctrine into the teaching curricula.

During 1951 a Loyalty of Government Employees investigation was conducted on [redacted] who was an applicant for the position of [redacted] at the [redacted] Washington, D. C. This investigation was based on information received from [redacted] [redacted] who stated he knew [redacted] employed at the [redacted] Washington, D. C. [redacted] described [redacted] as "way left of center" and that many of the employees thought [redacted] was a communist. [redacted] said [redacted] was instrumental in [redacted] [redacted] who were believed to be communists. In addition, [redacted] related [redacted] was close to Albert Wohlstetter whom he described as definitely "liberal" and a suspected communist. Albert Wohlstetter, 2637 Woodstock Road, Los Angeles, California, was interviewed in 1951 in connection with the above investigation and advised [redacted] worked [redacted] for approximately [redacted] Washington, D. C. Wohlstetter knew [redacted] only as an employee and had not seen him since 1947. He indicated, however, that he knew [redacted] casually as a student at [redacted] University, New York City, and as an employee in [redacted] Wohlstetter had no reason to question [redacted] loyalty to the United States.

The files of this Bureau disclose Albert James Wohlstetter, 200 West 108th Street, New York City, who was born December 19, 1913, in New York City had attended Columbia University, New York City, and Harvard University, Cambridge, Massachusetts. He was employed during World War II at the War Production Board and in 1946 was employed in the National Housing Authority. It was determined Wohlstetter had lunch on October 24, 1946, with Abraham George Silverman at Fan and Bill's Restaurant, Washington, D. C., for approximately 1 1/2 hours. The significance of this luncheon is not known. Silverman was cited in testimony of Elizabeth T. Bentley before a House Un-American Activities Committee in July, 1948, as a member of an espionage group of Government employees in Washington, D. C.

(First Name Unknown) Wallstetter was among a group of professors who attended discussions in Japan during early 1966 concerning problems of peace, disarmament and arms control in the Far East. The discussions were sponsored by the East Asian Research Center and the Center for International Affairs, both of which are adjuncts of Harvard University, Cambridge, Massachusetts, and with the cooperation of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace in New York City. Some of the meetings were held at the International House of Japan and while the topics discussed were not of a classified nature, they were "all off the record." Shigeharu Matsumoto who was present at some of the meetings was at that time Chairman of the Board of Directors of the International House of Japan. A confidential source abroad has also advised that Harusuke Toyota, Chief of the Planning Department, and Hiroko Kako, Deputy Chief of the Planning Department, both attached to the International House of Japan, also attended the discussions. The confidential source abroad described Matsumoto as a "pronounced leftist" and described Toyota as a suspected ~~secret~~ member of the Japanese Communist Party and a known contact of CH'EN Kuanghan, chief of the CH'EN espionage ring. Kako was described as a known member of the Japanese Communist Party.

On September 11, 1968, a confidential source who has furnished reliable information in the past furnished [redacted]

Miscellaneous

Current informants acquainted with communist activities in the Chicago area advised in January and February, 1970, that the appointee is unknown to them.

The "Chicago Maroon," student newspaper of the U of C, dated April 2, 1965, on page four, contained an article captioned, "Five Named To Positions On Faculty and Business Council," which reflects, in part, that ALBERT WOHLSTETTER, an authority on technology, strategy, and international affairs in the nuclear age, has been appointed University Professor in the Department of Political Science.

WOHLSTETTER, who was cited in February by Secretary of Defense ROBERT MC NAMARA, for "unique and valuable contributions to the conceptual framework of contemporary arms and arms control policy," was a Ford Professor at the University of California in Berkeley in 1963-64, and professor in residence at the University of California in Los Angeles (UCLA) in 1962-63.

CG 161-1880

The appointee was interviewed in connection with an official Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) investigation in May, 1969, as set forth below:

On May 22, 1969, Special Agents (SAs) of the FBI contacted ALBERT WOHLSTETTER, Professor of Political Science, U of C, who resides at 1550 North State Parkway, Chicago, Illinois. He furnished the following information:

Doctor WOHLSTETTER advised he is employed by the Rand Corporation of California as a consultant primarily in military matters and in addition, is a consultant to Henry Kissenger who is President NIXON's advisor. Doctor WOHLSTETTER stated he has recently been engaged in appearing before a sub-committee of the Congress on hearings concerning the anti-Ballistic missile system. WOHLSTETTER stated he is one of the few scientists who favors such a system and is speaking on behalf of the administration in attempting to have that system adopted.

Doctor WOHLSTETTER advised he has never been to the Soviet Union or any Soviet Bloc countries because he feels that his position in the past years has been so sensitive he felt it unwise to go to those countries. Doctor WOHLSTETTER also stated he is not acquainted with any Soviets in the United States on a professional or social basis. He said the only exceptions to this would be as follows:

In 1958, WOHLSTETTER stated he attended a conference in Geneva, Switzerland, held in conjunction with the Soviets concerning "Surprise Attack." During this conference he advised he met a Soviet (name unrecalled), with whom he conversed on an informal basis from time to time. During their conversation the Soviet advised him he had [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] that [REDACTED] This fact was relayed to [REDACTED] via a letter during that [REDACTED] (Doctor WOHLSTETTER), period and [REDACTED] asking [REDACTED] WOHLSTETTER stated when he showed this request to the Soviet, the Soviet immediately disassociated himself from WOHLSTETTER for the remainder of the conference.

b7C

WOHLSTETTER also advised he has met different Soviets who have visited from time to time at the University of Chicago in conjunction with various exchange programs. None of these individuals became personal friends and he could recall no one by name.

WOHLSTETTER stated his most recent contact with a Soviet was about 10 days ago when he had dinner with a colleague of his, [REDACTED] is the [REDACTED] He could not remember the name of the Soviet. WOHLSTETTER stated there was no significance attached to that dinner meeting and no attempt was made by the Soviet to get better acquainted with WOHLSTETTER. b6 b7C

In addition, WOHLSTETTER stated he has seen and met very briefly with Soviet individuals who have visited the Rand Corporation in California from time to time. WOHLSTETTER advised because of his position in military matters over the past years, that is a position which favors extensive preparedness in relation to a possible Soviet attack, he would be a highly unlikely candidate for a Soviet attempt to cultivate him as a contact in the United States.

In addition, WOHLSTETTER stated he considers some scientists who deal with the Soviets as being very naive in believing everything the Soviets say. He stated his experience over the years has caused him to be quite skeptical about Soviet intentions for peace when contrasted to their military capabilities. He advised it was his philosophy to deal with the Soviets on a day to day basis rather than looking for any long range solutions.

WOHLSTETTER advised because of his continuing consultation from the TRUMAN through the NIXON administrations regarding military capability, he tries to maintain a completely neutral position when it comes to politics. He advised he likes to stay out of politics as much as possible.

WOHLSTETTER stated he was surprised recently to receive an invitation which he accepted to the Pugwash Conference to be held in December of 1969. This conference will take place at Sochi, in the USSR. He said he was surprised because, as he stated before, he was not exactly favorable to the Soviets in their dealings with the United States. He said he advised the Security Office at the Rand Corporation of his intentions to attend this conference even though he had been reticent about going to the Soviet Union or Soviet-Bloc countries before this time.

LOS ANGELES COMMITTEE FOR DEFENSE OF THE BILL OF RIGHTS

Protection of Foreign Born (LACDBR)

A source advised in May 1969 that the LACDBR has expanded its former scope of interest relating to the foreign born, and has become a militant general defense organization allegedly seeking to safeguard the rights of all individuals, including the foreign born, as well as those seeking to avoid military service in the Armed Forces of the United States.

The LACDBR is a non-membership organization which is represented by an Administrative Board of about 125 individuals from loosely organized area committees interested in the work of the LACDBR. These board members are invited by ROSE CHERNIN, Executive Director of the LACDBR, who is the guiding, dominant, and motivating force behind the LACDBR. Its headquarters are maintained at 326 West Third Street, Los Angeles, California.

Another source advised in May 1969, that ROSE CHERNIN is currently Organizational Secretary of the Moranda Smith Section of the Southern California District Communist Party (SCDCP).

Safeguard Critics Contradict Sely

MON AUG 4 1969

BY ALBERT WOHLSTETTER

Will the Safeguard ABM system work? The critics say that the answer is no.

When a critic says Safeguard won't work, it sounds as though he were claiming that when a switch is thrown, there will be a fizzing sound and then merely some smoke coming out of the computers. A closer look at his argument, however, will reveal that he means Safeguard will not work because in an actual war the adversary won't let it work; the adversary will think of all sorts of effective countermeasures. 2-7-3

If the trouble lies in what an enemy can do to counter Safeguard or its alternatives, however, complexity is not the issue at all. Many very simple things won't work when a modern adversary won't let it: slingshots, catapults and moderately hardened silos among them.

The cost of the defense and the cost of offensive countermeasures are at the heart of the matter, and it is here that the critics have been weakest.

The components of Safeguard and their interactions have undergone and will undergo very extensive testing. Sometimes the argument is made that this is not enough, that the only realistic test would be an actual nuclear war. This is one test we all want to forgo.

Two-Way Limitation

However, the critics appear unaware that absence of realistic testing is a limitation affecting our certainty as to the performance of our offense also.

Another question is relevant to the ABM debate: If deterrence fails, is it worth attempting even a limited population defense—one that works at least against irrational small attacks?

The critics of defense in general hold that there is no need to worry about reducing the damage that would be done in case deterrence fails, because, they say, it is extremely unlikely that it will fail. But they are really of two quite different minds.

When they want to forgo any attempt to reduce the catastrophe, they are extremely reassuring about the low probability of nuclear war. They say deterrence is stable now and will be in the face of technological change. When they are urging drastic early steps towards disarmament and perhaps risky ones, they say the very opposite. Far from being stable, it seems that deterrence is certain to fail. The apocalypse may be soon.

This concludes an analysis of the current ABM debate by Prof. Albert Wohlstetter of the University of Chicago, mathematical logician and economist.

Uttered Opposing View

Take Prof. Wiesner. Against the Chinese as against the Russians, he says, "... we must rely on the offensive deterrent ... on our known ability to retaliate devastatingly in case of a nuclear attack. Ten percent of our SAC bomber force could kill 200 million Chinese." This is evidently all right for he also says, "The fantastic power of nuclear weapons provides a high degree of stability. Consequently a few bombs, certain to be delivered, will constitute a powerful deterrent."

On the other hand, in his apocalyptic mood Dr. Wiesner has said, "There is an ever-increasing likelihood of war so disastrous that civilization, if not man himself, will be eradicated." He has stated recently, "the odds are in favor of a major war within the next two decades."

Similarly, Sen. Fulbright expressed astonishment at recent hearings that the Department of Defense has sponsored a system for protection against the Chinese, since a Chinese attack would be irrational, suicidal.

On the other hand, in an article entitled, "Now Is the Time to Take Great Risks," in which he urges drastic and evidently chancy steps towards disarmament, he explains, "Sooner or later the law of averages will turn against us; an extremist or incompetent will come to power in one major country or another, or a misjudgment will be made by some perfectly competent official, or things will just get out of hand without anyone being precisely responsible as happened in 1914."

My own view is that the probability of nuclear war, if we are careful, can be kept small. But this requires continuing attention to the protection of strategic forces in the face of technical change. And even then there is always a significant possibility of breakdown.

ENCLOSURE

and therefore the need for some insurance in the form of defense.

Critics of ABM are strikingly inconsistent in their treatment of the Russians and the Chinese. In saying we don't need to defend Minuteman against Russian attack in the mid or late 1970s, they presume that, 20 years after Sputnik, Russian missiles would not be able to achieve accuracies and other performance characteristics of the Minuteman III and Poseidon missiles that we are now in the process of deploying. But in opposing an area defense of population against Chinese attack, they assume that the Chinese in their first generation ICBMs will be able to deploy penetration aids that took us billions of dollars, many trials and failures, and a dozen years to develop.

At a modest extra cost over and above that of defending our offense force, we can manage a very effective defense of our population against the Chinese. And moreover, given the general technological levels in the two societies, we can stay ahead of them for the foreseeable future.

Those who reject even a thin shield for population manage simultaneously to hold that (1) the shield would have no substantial

I refer to a doctrine known as "Minimum Deterrence" that holds that any attempt to protect our civilians will make nuclear war more likely, that we must depend exclusively on a threat to bomb enemy civilians. Not an obviously humane or liberal doctrine!

I would not myself have thought a few years ago that one could organize widespread popular indignation among church groups and mothers on the basis of so extreme and far-fetched a dogma: one that suggests that it is all right to threaten to launch missiles at enemy civilians, but peculiarly heinous to prepare to knock a missile down on its way to destroy millions of our civilians.

When men and women of "good will" take it as so obviously right to depend solely on a threat to launch nuclear weapons against cities, we've come a long way from the position taken throughout most of the 1950s by the scientists who now refer to any use of defense as "Magenot Line psychology."

It is interesting to recall how the final report of the Lincoln Summer Study, in which Drs. Wiesner, Killian, Kaysen and others were prominent, replied to the offense enthusiasts of that time. Putting "all our eggs in one basket," they said, is the essence of

"Magenot psychology," and it is exemplified by the "great emphasis placed in recent years on the development of an effective 'retaliatory force.'"

Indeed, liberals forget that many scientists who oppose the ABM have turned 180 degrees at least twice since Hiroshima in their slogans about defense.

Immediately after the war the American Federation of Scientists printed its "Creed" with the second point in bold face: THERE IS NO DEFENSE. It was, they said, One World or None. But after the Russians turned down the Baruch plan for international control of atomic energy, and it soon became clear that we were not about to have one world, a majority of the articulate scientists looked a bit more closely at whether the alternative really was no world at all.

Then, it was announced (e.g., by Ralph Lapp) that the scientists were "rebellious against the military dictum that there is no defense." The rebels lobbied for civil defense and continental air defense; opposed the H-bomb on the grounds that it was infeasible; or if feasible, undeliverable; and in any case, usable only against cities rather than legitimate military targets; and finally clashed bitterly with a minority that favored going ahead with the H-bomb.

The next 180 degree turn at the end of the 1950s saw the majority faction turn once more and adopt almost the caricature of the position it had been most recently opposing. It now calls for a nearly exclusive reliance on offense and the total rejection of defense of population against ballistic missiles. Cities, it seems, are now the only "legitimate" targets and defending cities is a provocation.

Wallmeyer In Long Beach Independent

effect even against small first generation Chinese attack, but (2) it would be so effective against the Russian massive sophisticated force that the latter could not inflict enough damage on us to deter us, even though (3) it takes only the prospect of a few bombs delivered to deter the Russians. These and other absurdities stem, I believe, from an extreme strategic dogma whose origins go back many years to the French General Staff and to operational research staffs like the Weapons System Evaluation Group of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Some Defense Backed

But even minimum deterrers who oppose defending population normally believe that we should protect our retaliatory force by concealment, shelter or active defense. The Safeguard ABM which aims to protect bombers and missiles is precisely the kind of thing that minimum deterrers would normally support. And in fact, many of them did, at least through March 6 of this year in testimony before the Senate. Hans Bethe, for example, said unequivocally that while he was opposed to the Sentinel defense of cities, there was another kind of ballistic missile defense, namely the defense of retaliatory hard points, and that was different; he favored that.

Then on March 14 the President announced the Safeguard program which was primarily directed at the defense of missiles, bombers and the national command authority.

This apparently posed something of a dilemma. A tremendous effort had gone into lobbying against ABM when it had been intended mainly to provide a shield for population against light ballistic missile attack. Hundreds of scientists had signed indignant petitions; public interest groups had been mobilized; speeches had been written for now indignant senators; ABM had become a SYMBOL.

At any rate, a good many of these scientists now said that, even with the change, they were still against it; and some offered extremely hasty calculations to suggest that the missiles and the bombers really required no protection, that Sprints and MSRs wouldn't do it anyway, that it would be better simply to multiply offense forces, or launch them on warning or do almost anything other than defend them.

This sequence of events suggests the folly of transforming a complex substantive issue into a symbol in black and white. I would not turn the simple picture upside down, with the good guys supporting ABM and the bad guys in opposition. I do not represent the Safeguard issue as one that divides the forces of light from those of dark. And neither do temperate opponents of starting deployment this year, such as Sen. Brooke.

Simply for the symbolism of taking Safeguard out of the country, some senators propose to build on distant Pacific atolls PAR and MSR radars that had been planned to protect Minuteman sites in Montana and Dakota. This would waste billions of dollars just to defeat the bad guys in the Administration. It is such bitter symbolic struggle with shadows that makes reflective choice hard to manage and delays the sober and rigorous examination required both for our defense and domestic needs.

Who Are 'Good' and 'Bad' Guys

8.3.69
BY ALBERT WOHLSTETTER

Choices about bombers or missiles or defenses against them are, in the most literal sense, vital. They can mean life or death. Yet making such choices carefully has never been easy. And least so now when the closing agonies of Vietnam drive us to wish away all problems of national defense.

Even thinking about such questions is unpleasant and can make your head hurt. It is much easier to make believe that the issues are simpler than they are, that the answers are plain to any man of good will, that the issues are in fact between the concerned men of good will and a reckless entrenched malevolent authority.

The "good guys" are against nuclear war, against taking reckless chances on nuclear accidents, against wasting money that might be used to solve our urgent domestic problems, against the "ever accelerating arms race," against the generals and munitions makers, for peace abroad and redressing the inequities at home.

F-7-3 Symbol of Virtue

The impassioned ABM debate, as the news media tend to picture it, purports to array the forces of virtue at last aroused against the forces of evil. ABM, as many of its opponents have said, is a symbol. One trouble with symbols, however, is that they often have little to do with reality.

Intense controversy blew up suddenly last fall with an alarm sounded by some Argonne physicists about placing Sentinel defense missiles only a few miles outside Chicago's city limits. It was not hard to arouse public interest groups on this subject. It seems that very few Republicans or Democrats favor nuclear accidents.

By late spring, however, various opponents of ABM were themselves recommending that, rather than use Safeguard ABM to protect our bombers and missiles, we should undertake (a) an emergency dispersal of armed bombers—which would mean landings and takeoffs with nuclear bombs in commercial airports of large cities; (b) an armed air alert—that on a continuing basis might mean an average of a dozen accidents per year involving nuclear weapons; and finally, (c), most amazing, that we try to empty our silos before enemy bombs get to them by immediately launching our Minutemen at Russian cities on the basis of radar indications—which would increase the nightmare possibility not only of a nuclear accident, but of an accidentally started worldwide nuclear holocaust.

Sen. William Fulbright, for example, has suggested that the greatest deterrent we could have is letting the Russians know that, if incoming Soviet ICBMs are detected, we will let fly with our Minutemen before they can be destroyed.

Prof. Albert Wohlstetter of the University of Chicago, mathematical logician and economist, worked during World War II on reliability and quality control in electrical equipment. For the last 18 years he has studied arms and arms control, specifically protecting strategic forces and stabilizing deterrence. The second part of his ABM analysis will be published in this space Monday.

Computerized Fate

Indeed this could be done. But such a mode of decision risks delegating to a computer the most terrible decision that would ever have been made, the decision for World War III.

A recommendation by the good guys to launch missiles on radar warning hardly fits the simple picture. Who are the prudent, reflective, good guys and who are the bad guys?

Trying to fit the pieces of the ABM debate about arms race and military budgets and domestic needs into the simple picture yields many insoluble puzzles.

Major critics of ABM (for example, Profs. Wiesner, Weinberg and Panofsky and Sens. Fulbright and Symington) run on about arms races; nonetheless they suggest doubling the Minuteman force rather than defending it with ABM. But a doubled Minuteman force could annihilate the projected large number of Soviet ICBMs: it would seriously endanger Russian ability to retaliate. If the Russians then, following the policy suggested by the vociferous ABM critics, responded by increasing their force, an accelerating race in strategic budgets and numbers of weapons would then be on in earnest.

Actually, in the last 10 years our strategic budget did not "accelerate"; it declined by half and precisely because in the 1960s we did not merely multiply strategic vehicles but increased their protection by methods such as blast resistant silos appropriate to the 1960s threat. In the mid and late 1970s improved offense accuracies will make blast protection inadequate and will make ABM an appropriate method for preserving a fixed offensive force.

Moreover, such active defense of the offense would not provoke a spiral any more than our silos did. Protecting Minuteman doesn't add to our first-strike capacity. Doubling Minuteman does. Just who is thinking prudently about avoiding arms races? Or about excessive military costs?

Doubling the Minuteman force and keeping B-52s steadily aloft in numbers equal to our ground alert would cost several times more than protecting Minuteman and B-52s with ABM: over $20 billion on a 5-year basis, even neglecting the implicit "spiral!" This is hardly the way to free resources for urgent domestic needs.

ENCLOSURE

Exhibit B

161-6983-22

This neglect of expense of alternatives is only one example of the casual handling of costs by the critics of ABM. And treating costs in an offhand way turns out to be crucial for their substantive criticism.

For example, opponents of ABM support their claim that overcoming Safeguard is easy by referring to a mysterious secret chart showing how the Russians can overwhelm the defenses of Minuteman by adding more of their SS-9 missiles. Such a chart hardly proves their point.

Any fixed amount of defense can, of course, be overcome by adding enough to the offense. This is obviously true. It is equally true that any fixed amount of offense can be smothered by adding enough defense. Both these truths are nearly tautological. For adversaries with roughly the same resources, the practical question has to do with how much extra the offense must pay to overcome a given amount of defense and how this compares with the cost of that defense itself.

The answer in the case of Safeguard defense of Minuteman is that it would cost the Russians more than twice as much to add offense as it would cost us to add an offsetting number of Sprint missiles with their fair share of the missile site radar expense.

That is why starting to deploy Safeguard is a good way to discourage an adversary from persisting in any attempt to remove our second-strike capability. On the other hand, if we do nothing to protect so large a part of our retaliatory force, we make it relatively cheap and fruitful for an adversary to get a capability to destroy it. The stereotypes about the arms race talk always of "action-reaction cycles." There are inaction-reaction cycles too. And some positive acts inhibit response by making it fruitless.

How have the critics of ABM missed the point on costs? First, they rarely mention the adversary's costs and never measure the extra cost to the offense to overcome an increment in Safeguard defense. In fact, one distinguished senator opposing ABM has suggested that the large costs of SS-9s do not concern the Russians since they are not capitalists. Another opposition senator holds that the Russians are so limited in resources that they will not buy enough SS-9s to destroy Minuteman even if there is no Safeguard to make their resource cost higher.

A more reasonable suggestion than either of these two is that expanding the SS-9 involves a serious resource expenditure for the Russians: perhaps worth it if we indicate we have no intention of protecting Minuteman; and not worth it if we can add protection more cheaply than they can overcome it.

Not only are SS-9 missiles with three 5-MT reentry vehicles expensive, but so are the lower-yield less accurate SS-11s, which have recently been proposed by critics as "cheap-defense radar killers." In fact, on a per-warhead basis they are more expensive than the SS-9s and much more expensive than the defense missiles that would counter them.

Further Cost Factor

Nor would SS-9s with 20 to 30 low-yield reentry vehicles be cheap radar killers, as recently suggested by Prof. Wiesner, Weinberg and Rathjens. They are much more advanced than the SS-9 with three accurate 5-megaton MIRVs. Yet these same critics doubt that the Russians can get the latter. Most important, if one includes the several billion dollars for research and development, getting two dozen missiles especially to kill radar would involve extremely high unit costs, even neglecting the expense of procurement and operation.

The critics not only neglect adversary costs, they inflate the costs of the Safeguard defense of Minuteman. They attribute the entire costs of the Safeguard program to the protection of Minuteman. They include research, development, testing and evaluation costs which both opponents and advocates of Safeguard agree should continue whether or not we start deployment now.

Furthermore, they ignore the fact that Safeguard is intended not just to defend the Minutemen, but protect the National Command authority, to defend manned bomber bases and to provide a thin shield for population.

In estimating the cost of a defense interception, critics neglect a major feature of the Safeguard system, that will permit immediate replacement of defense missiles that fail during or a short time after launch. Since most failures occur within this time period, a reserve of some 15% or 20% assures an extremely high probability of interception. Critics of ABM, by ignoring this, have assumed that three times more defense missiles are required than the probable number.

Defense of Radar

This neglect is related to the critics' misunderstanding about the "softness" of the defense radars (MSRs and PARs) and the role of blast resistance in the defense. It is well known that the radars have less than one-tenth the blast resistance of the Minuteman silos. They are, however, protected primarily by interceptor missiles, and they are made just blast resistant enough to force an offense warhead to come close and so permit the defense to fire several times at it. The defense then can replace missiles that fail and so insure a high probability of interception.

A final major defect in the critics' estimate of the cost of a defense interception comes from ignoring the important strategy for defending an offense force known as "preferential defense." Defending missiles is a very different thing from defending population. If only half the population survived, this would be a catastrophe of unimaginable dimensions. But the survival of fewer than half our missiles may be more than enough to assure retaliation.

The defense then can decide which Minuteman silo, or if there is more than one radar, which radar to defend and can decide this at the last minute. The offense cannot know this and therefore must attack all targets as if they were all defended. When the defense doubles the number of interceptors, the offense must multiply its warheads four times.

All these errors in cost add up to a very large mistake about the ease of overcoming Safeguard.

[redacted] Associate General Council,

He has no knowledge of ALBERT JAMES WOHLSTETTER.
The National Housing Agency and Office of Housing Expediter

He vaguely recalled the appointee working at the National Housing Agency (NHA) and Office of Housing was an acute housing shortage and veterans from World War II were returning to the United States without finding houses in which to accommodate their families. Consequently the

He recalled the appointee as a former employee of the combined offices of NHA and OHE, around 1946 and 1947 and also recalled that the appointee was employed on a rather high level probably as an expediter in the above mentioned offices.

WFO 161-6443

At that time the office of NHA and OHE was under the direction of WILSON W. WYATT, who was issuing directives to other Government agencies as to the ways and means these agencies could cooperative in providing housing for returning Veterans of World War II. WYATT later retired to Louisville, Kentucky and is believed by [] to be engaged in private practice there. EMPLOYMENT

[REDACTED] SCIENCE APPLICATIONS INTERNATIONAL CORPORATION (SAIC), La Jolla, California, was contacted on January 6, 1986, and verified that ALBERT JAMES WOHLSTETTER was employed as a consultant from October 29, 1973, to September 6, 1979. [REDACTED] stated that inasmuch as the applicant was employed on a consulting basis, the company did not maintain a personnel file of the applicant.

DR. BEYSTER, President of SAIC, noted on the appointee's application, was unavailable for an interview due to extensive traveling. It was determined DR. BEYSTER did not have daily contact with appointee but names of two individuals who worked with appointee on a regular basis were provided.

On January 3, 1986, DR. JAMES MARTIN, Senior Vice President, SAIC, La Jolla, California, was contacted regarding the appointee. MARTIN has known the appointee on a professional and social basis for the past 14 years, and described him as "the best National Security analyst in the United States today".

The appointee has a strong dedication to U.S. National Security and the United States, high professional moral standards, a strong sense of honesty and trustworthiness and "bends over backwards" to be fair to those around him. The appointee handles pressure competently and remains rational under stress.

MARTIN is not aware of any drug use or alcohol abuse and no derogatory information was furnished. MARTIN "absolutely" recommends the appointee for a position with the Government.

On January 3, 1986, H. THOMAS HICKS, Corporate Vice President, SAIC, La Jolla, California, was contacted regarding the appointee. HICKS has known the appointee for ten years on a professional basis and stated the appointee is "thought of extremely highly and recognized as one of the most senior and thoughtful persons in foreign policy of the United States". HICKS further described appointee as an individual with a very strong character, keen insight and a domineering, straight-forward intellect. Under pressure or stress "he reacts like a tiger - he likes it". He is very self-confident and self-assured.

SD 161B-1869

HICKS has never seen appointee abuse alcohol or use drugs nor observed any instances of prejudice. No derogatory information was furnished by HICKS. As a citizen, HICKS would "feel good about him (WOHLSTETTER) being in that position".

RECORD CHECKS

On January 6, 1986, the records of the San Diego U.S. Attorney's Office were checked by [redacted] for any information regarding appointee. Said search was negative.

Director FBI
J. Edgar Hoover Building
Ninth and Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, D.C. 20535

Dear Mr. Sessions:

Enclosed you will find an article on Albert Wohlstetter, who holds top security clearance both as a member of the President's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board (PFIAB) and of the Commission on Integrated Long-Term Strategy at the Pentagon. Mr. Wohlstetter recently furthered the "decoupling" of the United States from its NATO allies, when the Commission on Strategy, published its first report, "Discriminate Deterrence," which calls for lifting the nuclear umbrella of the United States over Western Europe.

Mr. Wohlstetter even argued that the U.S. should not use nuclear forces in the advent of an overwhelming Soviet conventional attack upon Europe, and announced that he would bury once-and-for-all the doctrine of "massive retaliation." His report caused anguish, shock, and dismay among Western European leaders to such a degree that the White House went out of its way to say that this was by no means the current U.S. strategic posture.

A two month investigation by [redacted] and my associates at "Executive Intelligence Review" discovered that Mr. Wohlstetter had been a Communist: a fact that he has generally tried to keep secret. Specifically, he was a member of a Trotskyite sect known as the League for a Revolutionary Workers Party, and, it is a matter of fact that many members of the Left and Right Opposition dropped their hostility toward the Soviet Union in light of the sort of de-Stalinization represented by Mikhail Gorbachev's "glasnost" ruse.

It is believed that this matter may not have been given adequate attention in the various background checks that Mr. Wohlstetter has undergone for his security clearance, and, further, that this fact may have a bearing upon Mr. Wohlstetter's outrageous view of U.S. long-term strategy.

This letter was answered in our correspondence with [redacted] dated 8/26/88 which was drafted in response to his first letter (same subject, same article) dated 7/25/88

So far Mr. Wohlstetter has refused comment to "Executive Intelligence Review," even after I offered to retract any detail of the investigation that could reasonably be called into question. I am therefore sending a copy of the article to members of the President's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board and again to [redacted] who issued Mr. Wohlstetter his clearance to participate in PFIAB discussions. I would be glad to answer any questions you may have concerning how this background check was conducted and the findings in it.

NOTE: [redacted] wrote to Director Sessions enclosing an article about ALBERT WOHLSTETTER, whom he identifies as a member of the President's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board, which indicates that WOHLSTETTER is a communist. [redacted] is concerned that this information was not given proper attention in the clearance checks on WOHLSTETTER. He asks acknowledgment of receipt of the article so "it will not be necessary to send it to your agency through another channel." Above handling recommended by SSA [redacted] SPIN Unit. CID who advised that Executive Intelligence Review and [redacted] are affiliated with Lyndon Larouche and a 1986 FBI background investigation of WOHLSTETTER in conjunction with a Presidential appointment found no indication that WOHLSTETTER was affiliated with the Communist Party. An update of this investigation is currently ongoing.

EMPLOYMENT

Chief of Naval Operations
CENTER FOR NAVAL ANALYSES
Executive Panel
4401 Ford Avenue
Alexandria, Virginia 22302

The following investigation was conducted by Special Agent (SA) [redacted] regarding the appointee, ALBERT JAMES WOHLSTETTER:

Commander [redacted] Assistant for Strategy, advised on April 25, 1988, that the appointee is one of thirty distinguished civilians who are advisors to the Chief of Naval Operations. [redacted] recalls his introduction to the appointee as having been in November of 1986, at a meeting of the captioned executive panel. The interviewee characterized the appointee as "an interesting man, quite a great thinker, (as well as) one of the great nuclear strategists alive today, or that ever was." He believes the appointee to be emotionally stable but has no knowledge concerning the appointee's financial stability, although he is aware that the appointee has been an advisor for a number of years, and commented, "I would take it that he's well paid for his efforts." When asked to characterize the appointee's reputation among his professional peers, [redacted] responded, "Of a group of very highly regarded people, he's got to be one or two among them, both with respect to sheer intelligence and professional reputation." The interviewee recommends the appointee with respect to character and loyalty, as well as "most definitely" to his associates. [redacted] is aware of no foreign contacts on the appointee's part, nor is he aware of any work-related problems experienced by the appointee. He has never known the appointee to abuse alcohol or use illegal drugs and is unaware of any radical or adverse political associations on the appointee's part. He believes the appointee would have no problems in continuing to deal effectively with sensitive information and has never known the appointee to manifest any evidence of prejudice or bias. He is aware of no derogatory information concerning the appointee nor is he aware of any aspect of the appointee's past that would render him susceptible to any kind of a coercive effort. He is not in a position to comment on the appointee's interaction with his own family. The interviewee "most definitely" recommends that the

b7c

appointee continue in a position of trust and confidence with the United States Government.

Captain [redacted] Naval Operations Executive Panel, advised on April 25, 1988, that his introduction to the appointee was in either 1982 or 1983 at an academic conference on national security policy. The interviewee characterized the appointee as "one of the great names and high recognition people in our field," additionally characterizing the appointee as "cerebral" and as having "refined powers of analysis." [redacted] believes the appointee to be "entirely" emotionally stable but has no specific knowledge concerning the appointee's financial stability, mentioning however that PAN HEURISTICS, the appointee's current employer, has had a significant voice in the national security arena for the last ten years, thus giving the interviewee the impression that the appointee is "well-established." When asked to characterize the appointee's reputation on the Panel, [redacted] commented that the appointee is "unquestionably one of our finest contributors; his contributions are always of the first rank." The interviewee recommends the appointee with respect to character and loyalty, as well as to his professional associates. [redacted] is aware of no foreign contacts of the appointee which would be considered unusual. When asked as to whether he was aware of any work-related problems experienced by the appointee, the interviewee relayed that his office functions to facilitate the operation of the Executive Panel, principally assembling people with expertise which can be brought to bear on a particular topic and that he does not interact professionally with the advisors themselves. Regardless, [redacted] is aware of no work-related problems experienced by the appointee. He knows of no radical or adverse political associations on the appointee's part nor of any derogatory information concerning him. He believes the appointee would have no problems in continuing to deal effectively with sensitive information and has never known the appointee to manifest any evidence of prejudice or bias. As the appointee is based on the West Coast, [redacted] is not in a position to comment on the appointee's interaction with his own family. He is aware of no aspect of the appointee's past that would render the appointee susceptible to any kind of a coercive effort and "unequivocally" recommends the appointee to continue in a position of trust and confidence with the United States Government.

[] further advised that, because of the appointee's pre-eminence in the field, he and the director of the Executive Panel are the only non-Panel members that would interact with the appointee. The director was unavailable for interview on April 25, 1988.

[] additionally advised on April 25, 1988, that the appointee is not a paid employee of the Navy. When asked as to whether the appointee had an official personnel folder (OPF) on the premises, [] advised that this office does not maintain files on panel members.

Director FBI
J. Edgar Hoover Building
Ninth and Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, D.C. 20535

Dear Mr. Sessions:

Enclosed you will find an article on Albert Wohlstetter, who holds top security clearance both as a member of the President's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board (PFIAB) and of the Commission on Integrated Long-Term Strategy at the Pentagon. Mr. Wohlstetter recently caused an outraged response from our NATO allies, when the Commission published its first report, "Discriminate Deterrence," which calls for the nuclear decoupling of the United States from Western Europe.

A two month investigation by myself and my associates at "Executive Intelligence Review" discovered that Mr. Wohlstetter had been a Communist: a fact that he has generally tried to keep secret. It is believed that this matter may not have been given adequate attention in the various background checks that Mr. Wohlstetter has undergone for his security clearance, and, further, that this fact may have a bearing upon Mr. Wohlstetter's outrageous view of U.S. long-term strategy.

Please acknowledge receipt of the enclosed article detailing this matter, so that it will not be necessary to send it to your agency through another channel.

Sincerely yours,

A. Wohlstetter and the Trotskyites in the national security woodwork

by Scott Thompson

In December 1980, British Fabian Society executive Stuart Butler, then operating out of the ostensibly conservative Washington, D.C. Heritage Foundation, boasted to an interviewer that the just-elected President, Ronald Reagan, "the most conservative American President to be elected in decades, will oversee the implementation of a left-wing socialist agenda."

Perhaps nowhere was that "left-wing socialist" agenda more clearly spelled out by the Reagan administration than in the January 1988 interim report of the Commission on Integrated Long-Term Strategy, entitled Discriminate Deterrence. Also known as the Wohlstetter Report, after its chairman and principal author, Albert Wohlstetter, the document proclaimed the end of America's postwar nuclear umbrella over Western Europe, called for the phased withdrawal of American troops from Europe, and proposed that over the coming decades, America's strategic attention would shift away from a Soviet-centered security policy to an emphasis on debt-collecting "brushfire wars" in the Third World.

When the report was released, every sane political figure in Western Europe recoiled in horror. Moscow rejoiced. The immediate response was so intense that the Reagan White House was forced to issue a hasty disclaimer of the fundamental conclusions drawn by the study commission appointed by the secretary of defense.

Considering the disastrous implications of the long-term strategy report, it was no surprise to EIR when Pentagon sources reported in the spring of this year that Wohlstetter was a leading suspect in a "Mr. X" committee believed to be spying on the United States on behalf of Israel and the Soviet Union.

In the course of several months' exhaustive study of Wohlstetter's long career inside the U.S. national security establishment (he is currently a member in good standing of the President's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board, PFIAB, the prestigious and powerful agency overseeing the entire U.S. intelligence community), EIR investigators have learned that the former RAND Corporation nuclear strategist has a secret past that he has gone to great lengths to conceal: a leading position within the Trotskyite wing of the international communist movement.

Wohlstetter's apparently obsessive effort to conceal that communist past drew the interest of an EIR investigative team. After archive reviews and an extensive series of interviews we publish here the fruits of that probe to date.

From Trotskyism to systems analysis

Early in 1951, friends of Wohlstetter's from his radical period in the 1930s, landed him a job in the economics division of the RAND Corporation in Santa Monica, California. This not only provided Wohlstetter with a means to bury his Trotskyite past, but also the means by which to submerge himself in a radical transformation of U.S. strategic policy, away from a traditional military emphasis upon maintaining a war-winning posture.

Among those with whom Wohlstetter would work on this transformation of U.S. military strategy at RAND were Andrew Marshall, Henry Rowen, Herman Kahn, and Fred Iklé. In former days, Wohlstetter, Rowen, and Kahn were known as "the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost of RAND." Others in Washington added RAND founder Bernard Brodie to the group, and condemned them as the "Four Pursemen of the Apocalypse."

By 1952, Albert Wohlstetter had plunged himself into strategic policy at RAND. Starting with the assumption that the Soviet Union might launch a surprise attack upon the United States, Wohlstetter, Rowen, and others employed pioneering "systems analysis" methods—presaging Defense Secretary Robert McNamara's "biggest bang for the buck" techniques—to attempt to win the Strategic Air Command away from a strategy based upon early warning for a preemptive, war-winning strike against the Soviet Union. This back-step (found in RAND Report R-244-S) from classical war-winning military theory to a concept of "deterrence" based upon survivability of forces after a Soviet first strike, eroded military opposition to such later refinements as the MAD doctrine, at a time of overwhelming U.S. strategic superiority. The way was prepared for the insane theory propounded by Henry Kissinger and others in a Council on Foreign Relations study which picked up on the theorizing of Bertrand Russell's "Trust" back-channel to the Soviet Union, the Pugwash Conference.

The decade-long campaign by Wohlstetter and his RAND "bases group" against traditional military posture, culminated in 1957, the year of the revival of the "Anglo-Soviet Trust" through Russell's Pugwash Conference. A special study group was created by H. Rowan Gaither, known as the Gaither Committee. Gaither was a member of the Council on Foreign Relations and chairman of the board of the Ford Foundation, who brought in Jerome B. Wiesner, a founding member of Russell's Pugwash Conference from MIT, to act as his chief assistant. Working alongside Wiesner was Wohlstetter's colleague in the RAND study, Andrew Marshall. Marshall is currently situated to implement Discriminate Deterrence as the director of the Defense Department's Office of Net Assessments, a post that he originally was appointed to fill in 1973 by then-Secretary of Defense James Schlesinger.

The purpose of the Gaither Committee was to conduct a full-scale assault upon the doctrine of "massive retaliation," upon which the NATO alliance had been built. The Gaither Committee argued that the Soviet Union would soon develop 50,000 deliverable megatons, which would pose "a threat which may become critical in 1959 or early 1960." The final report of the Gaither Committee was kept secret from those with a "need to know" in the U.S. military, but it sent shockwaves through the CFR and Pugwash "Anglo-Soviet Trust" circles of the Establishment, spreading defeatism and winning many to a position against traditional military thinking.

In 1959, Rowen, Wohlstetter, and Marshall became active in John F. Kennedy's presidential campaign. Rowen was later rewarded with an appointment as deputy assistant defense secretary under McNamara, where he advocated the Pugwash Conference's and Kissinger's insane doctrines of "Mutually Assured Destruction" and "Flexible Response," in opposition to the doctrine of "war winning." Rowen successfully imposed his views during the 1961 Berlin Wall crisis. (Rowen's most recent government post was as chairman of the National Intelligence Estimates Board at CIA from 1980 to 1983.) Returning to RAND, Rowen joined with Wohlstetter, Kahn, and Marshall in advocating Jimmy Carter's disastrous Presidential Directive 59 (a replay of Schlesinger's NSDM-242), which enshrined "Flexible Response" as U.S. military policy. PD-59, however, still maintained the possibility of a NATO nuclear response to an overwhelming Soviet conventional assault, a provision that Discriminate Deterrence seeks to finally eliminate.

A hidden Trotskyite background

Unlike Iklé and other RAND associates, Albert Wohlstetter has carefully avoided any post that would require close Senate scrutiny of his past. Still, serious questions are posed as to how Wohlstetter won clearance by the FBI and other government security agencies for his work on such concerns as the Commission on Integrated Long-Term Strategy and PFIAB. Assuming the best, it can now be demonstrated that there was a concerted campaign by Wohlstetter to cover up a Trotskyite background, which links Wohlstetter to a radical network spanning three generations in both the United States and England. EIR investigators had to talk to many, many of Wohlstetter's associates from the 1930s, before anyone would spill the beans. Wohlstetter had more than a "vaguely radical past."

Two published sources exist that corroborate these interviews, showing that Wohlstetter was a 1930s member of a Trotskyite sect known as the League for a Revolutionary Workers Party (LRWP): The New York Intellectuals by Alan Wald, and Unrepentant Radical: An American Activist Account of Five Turbulent Decades by Sidney Lens. The LRWP was founded in May 1934 by a former Wall Street petroleum analyst Max Gould (a.k.a. B.J. Fields), who had worked directly with Leon Trotsky in Istanbul for four months, when he won Trotsky's support for his factional positions in the Communist League of America.

Founding the LRWP with Gould/Fields was Benjamin Gitlow, who had been a leading member of the Ruthenberg-Gitlow faction of the Communist Party, U.S.A., which had the support of Nikolai Bukharin in the Comintern. When Stalin cracked down upon Bukharin and Jay Lovestone at the 1928 Comintern Congress—thereby beginning to end the "Anglo-Soviet Trust" arrangements until Russell and Khrushchov's 1957 revival—Gitlow became the first secretary general of Lovestone's Communist Party (Opposition), which remained in contact with a faction of the GPU and GRU Soviet intelligence agencies until the final 1938 purge of Bukharin by Stalin. Gitlow left Lovestone to join with Gould/Fields in an attempt to merge the Left and Right Opposition in the United States through the LRWP: the same organizations whose members form the lower level of the Trust. After losing Gitlow, then Gould/Fields, the LRWP stumbled on until 1940 as a small sect.

Sidney Hook and the radical philosophers

Wohlstetter avoided interviews with EIR, which was anxious to inquire how he became a Marxist radical tied to the circles of the Trust, but one of the chief influences that EIR was able to uncover was a string of radical philosophers linked to Bertrand Russell of the Pugwash Conference and the Cambridge Apostles, whose careers span the 20th century.

At City College of New York, Wohlstetter was influenced by Morris Raphael Cohen (1880-1947), a professor of philosophy and mathematics, who was a Russian Jewish emigré to the United States. While attending cheder and later a yeshiva in Russia, Cohen became sympathetic to the nihilist movement, whose groups conducted terrorist assaults against the czarist "oppressor." Upon his arrival in the United States in 1892, Cohen joined Daniel de Leon's Socialist Labor Party (SLP), and he was closely affiliated with its Russian Jewish emigré faction, grouped around such organs as Arbeiter Zeitung.

Gaining entrance to the City College of New York (CCNY) in 1895, Cohen continued his SLP activities, forming a "Marx Circle" with other Russian Jewish emigrés during de Leon's campaign for assemblyman. This Marx Circle met regularly at the Henry Street Settlement House, which had been established by followers of the British Fabian Society.

While at CCNY, Cohen came under the influence of a Scottish philosopher named Thomas Davidson (1840-1901), who had earlier been the chief influence behind the founding of the "ethical socialist" movement in late-19th-century England. Between 1881-83, Thomas Davidson founded the Fellowship of the New Life, from which the British Fabian Society arose in 1884. Traveling between Italy (where he was studying the work of Antonio Rosmini-Serbati, founder of the lay order of the Brethren of Charity) and England, Davidson worked through Percival Chubb to bring together the utopian socialist Fellowship group, which included such later founders of the Fabian Society as: Havelock Ellis, Frank Podmore, Hubert Bland, Edward Pease, and Frederick Keddell.

Davidson was among those sharing membership between the Fellowship and the Fabian Society. He traveled to the United States, and gathered around him a group of Jewish Russian emigrés, including Morris Raphael Cohen, whom Davidson offered to adopt shortly before his death. In the United States, Davidson, who had also been a founder of the Aristotelian Society in England, brought together a string of radical philosophical associations, including a summer school at Glenmore Farm in the Adirondacks, where he introduced Cohen to Aristotelian philosophy; and, a school for Jewish Russian emigrés called Breadwinners College, which Cohen ran after Davidson's death. Through Davidson's association with Felix Adler of the Ethical Culture Society, Cohen won a scholarship for graduate study at Harvard University, where he befriended William James, before returning to teach at CCNY. Cohen's "Marx Circle" continued within Davidson's enterprise.

Morris Raphael Cohen was strongly influenced by Bertrand Russell, who held Cohen in high regard among American philosophers. "It was the study of Russell's Principia Mathematica which I began soon after I was appointed to teach mathematics at City College in 1902, that finally liberated me. . . . Russell came closer to being my philosophical god than any one before or since," wrote Cohen in his autobiography. Cohen was a staunch defender of Russell when the mayor of New York refused to let Russell teach at CCNY.

Cohen broke from the Socialist Labor Party in 1907, and became an early writer for New Republic, when it was founded in 1914. Michael Straight of the family that launched the New Republic was later revealed to be a member of the Philby, Burgess, Maclean KGB espionage network, recruited while he was a Cambridge Apostle by Sir Anthony Blunt.

Toward the end of his life, Cohen became a liberal, but he launched many leading Jewish organizations that shaded into Zionism. Apart from Wohlstetter, among those CCNY students trained by Cohen were:

- Ernest Nagel, the Aristotelian-Russellite symbolic logician, who later became Wohlstetter's mentor at Columbia University.

- the philosopher Morton White, with whom Wohlstetter wrote an article for the Trotskyite Partisan Review magazine, which appeared in its fall 1939 issue (Vol. 1, No. 5), titled, "Who Are the Friends of Semantics." It was a radical defense of Aristotelian symbolic logic.

- Jay Lovestone, the future Bukharin-appointed general secretary of the CPUSA, who worked with Soviet intelligence until 1938.

- Bertram Wolfe, a Lovestonite-Communist.

Another important individual in the Wohlstetter story who was trained by Morris Raphael Cohen was Sidney Hook, who told EIR that he has been a lifelong friend of Albert Wohlstetter, as has his friend, Ernest Nagel. According to Hook, Wohlstetter and Morton White used to attend classes given by Hook at New York University, when they were graduate students around the Trotskyite LRWP. Hook was a leader of the Marxist faction at CCNY, before he, like Wohlstetter, went on to do graduate work at Columbia University. Hook became a leading protégé of the then-pro-Bolshevik John Dewey. It was at Columbia that Hook began the project that was to occupy him throughout the 1930s, of seeking a synthesis between Karl Marx's "dialectical materialism" and Dewey's pragmatism.

Graduating from Columbia University, Hook received a Guggenheim Fellowship in 1928 to study post-Hegelian philosophers in Germany, where he met Karl Korsch, the founder of the Frankfurt School. Of relevance to this study of Albert Wohlstetter—as the godfather of the "Mr. X" Committee for Soviet "false flag" spy Jonathan Pollard—is just whom Korsch was associated with in founding the Frankfurt School, which Korsch modeled upon "the Fabian research office." At a small 1921 gathering of Marxist students in Thuringen, financed by the Argentine-German grain trading family of Felix Weil, among those present with Korsch were Hede Massing, Paul Massing, and Richard Sorge. All three friends of Korsch would become fixtures in Soviet intelligence, especially Richard Sorge, the grandson of Karl Marx's secretary.

It is notable that while he was in Germany, Hook took up once again with two friends from the William Z. Foster faction of the CPUSA, who had become agents of Soviet intelligence. Hook later brought Karl Korsch to the United States, and attempted to introduce him to radical American philosophical circles. Considering Hook's close friendship, this may have included Albert Wohlstetter.

A year later, Hook received the singular right to study at David Ryazanov's Marx-Engels Institute. Sorge also followed this path, from the Frankfurt School to this institute. Ryazanov was a leading Soviet member of the Anglo-Soviet Trust. Although Hook, today at the Hoover Institute, is known to be anti-Soviet, he was so pro-Soviet in the 1930s, when he became the teacher of Albert Wohlstetter, that he was asked by Earl Browder, the general secretary of the CPUSA, to found a "spy apparatus" for the Soviet Union in the "centers of scientific and industrial research." Browder motivated Hook to set up this Soviet espionage network, based upon the fact that Hitler's rise to power meant Germany would attack the Soviet Union.

Passing the mantle

Just as Albert Wohlstetter was steeped in Marxist doctrine by a network of socialist philosophers that spans three generations, so he, too, has been the godfather of a wide-ranging network that has burrowed into the U.S. defense establishment and other policymaking circles of government. Apart from Fred Iklé and his RAND colleagues, this network includes Richard Perle, the former assistant secretary of defense for international economic, trade, and security policy. Perle is another suspected member of the Pollard "Mr. X" committee, who narrowly escaped arrest in 1970 for espionage on behalf of Israel when wiretaps on the Israeli embassy showed Perle leaking highly classified information from his position on the staff of the late Sen. Henry "Scoop" Jackson, probably in association with Helmut Sonnenfeldt, whose appointment as undersecretary of the Treasury was held up in 1973 for this reason.

Perle met Wohlstetter as a teenager in California. He dated Wohlstetter's daughter, Joan. Perle described himself at the time of this meeting as a "socialist." In an article on Richard Perle appearing in the Nov. 24, 1987 issue of the Washington Post, this lifelong relationship between Perle and Wohlstetter is described as follows:

"Wohlstetter's ideas became Perle's ideas; his network Perle's; and, as Perle traveled through the bureaucratic catacombs of Washington, his first mentor remained his intellectual Virgil—always 'enormously helpful,' says Perle. He himself was never an original strategist. His views were mostly elaborations of Wohlstetter's."

It is therefore doubly significant that Richard Perle is the architect of the "zero option" policy, sold to the Reagan administration for the 1986 Reykjavik summit, which underlies the INF Treaty's step toward the decoupling of the United States from NATO. The next step is to be found in the the Iklé-Wohlstetter Discriminate Deterrence report.

Bush seizes the reins of government

by Nicholas F. Benton

Vice-President George Bush was publicly handed control of the White House on July 7, in a widely overlooked but extraordinary move which effects the closest thing to a direct transfer of power, short of the death of the President or invocation of the 25th Amendment against the chief executive.

Characterized by White House spokesmen as merely an effort to gear up for the Bush presidential campaign, a two-hour meeting was held over lunch July 7 in which the initiative for presidential policymaking was shifted from the aging President Reagan to Bush.

The following institutional changes were made which effectively implemented the transfer:

1) The creation of a "small group of staff members" from the top echelons of the White House staff, chaired by the President's Chief of Staff Ken Duberstein, and the Bush campaign, led by Bush's Chief of Staff Craig Fuller, to meet regularly and "ensure close coordination." This group will essentially set White House policy, filling the role vacated by the departure in June of Howard Baker.

2) The formation of a "shadow staff" of Bush personnel to monitor the daily activities of the President's staff. This means that Fuller now attends the daily staff meetings with Duberstein; a member of Bush's press staff attends all the staff meetings of White House press spokesman Marlin Fitzwater; and Bush staff people "work closely on a continuous basis" with White House Political Director Frank Donatelli.

3) President Reagan's role will be reduced to that of a public spokesman for the election of Bush between now and the election. White House spokesman Fitzwater said during a July 7 briefing announcing these changes, that Reagan's schedule includes, effectively, only three weeks of even apparent governing of the nation between the time of the Republican National Convention in mid-August and the November election. The rest of the time will be taken up by vacations and, from Oct. 1 onward, spending "at least two days a week" (half or more of his work schedule time) campaigning for the vice president.

Within a week of this development, Bush's enhanced role was clearly evident in the choice of former Pennsylvania Gov. Richard Thornburgh to become the new attorney general. Bush announced ahead of time that if the choice was to his liking, he would consider keeping the man on in the next administration if he were elected.

Dear [redacted]

Reference is made to my letter dated May 24, 1988, which furnished your office with the partial results of a limited update investigation concerning Mr. Wohlstetter.

In accordance with a request received from your office dated September 19, 1988, we have reviewed appropriate records regarding Mr. Albert Wohlstetter and the League for a Revolutionary Workers Party and have found no pertinent information connecting Mr. Wohlstetter to the League or any communist organization.

Sincerely yours,

Floyd I. Clarke
Assistant Director
Criminal Investigative Division

NOTE: [redacted] of the Lyndon Larouche sponsored Executive Intelligence Review sent an article [redacted] to both FBI and [redacted] the article alleges Wohlstetter was a member of the League in the 1930s which allegedly was a communist affiliated organization. [redacted] was contacted and he could find no references to the League. [redacted] spoke with [redacted] who is an expert on the Socialist Workers Party who described the League as a small splinter group that existed in New York from 1934 to 1940. Various files dating to the 1930s were noted on an indices search and those that could be located had nothing pertinent in them to do with Wohlstetter. The League was referenced as having a communist affiliation. [redacted] Assistant to the Counsel to the President, was advised of above on 9/21/88 and she requested a one or two sentence letter stating the results of our file review. She stated the White House felt no further investigation was needed beyond the file review. She stated she would like the letter by 9/21/88 since a meeting was to be held 9/22/88 regarding Wohlstetter.

Contained in the file is a report of unknown origin, entitled Revolutionaries and the National Guard. Within that report is a summarization of the Revolutionary Workers League and its activities as concerns the National Guard. In November, 1939, that group issued a leaflet opposing the United States military forces. The League for a Revolutionary Workers Party was one of the groups sponsoring the issuance of the pamphlet.
